Feufollet

TONIGHT

Feufollet is Americana at its finest—reverential but wholly nonconformists. The band takes Cajun, honky-tonk, and string-band music as their starting point, and keeps an open mind about where their song craft will lead them.

“For more than a decade, Lafayette’s Feufollet has waved the flag for Cajun music, whether planting its feet in its roots or pushing its boundaries.”

Delta Rae

Opening Act: Liz Longley

The earthy, familial, alt-pop band Delta Rae skillfully juggles gospel-tinged, country-rock, sensual blue-eyed soul, and harmony-laden Americana music, resulting in an infectious, radio-ready sound that falls somewhere between Nickel Creek and Adele.

“If Fleetwood Mac came up in North Carolina, they might resemble Delta Rae.”

—Rolling Stone

Pharoah Sanders Quartet

NEA Jazz Master Ferrell “Pharoah” Sanders is a legendary jazz saxophonist who has shown a remarkable facility in performing in a variety of styles—from free to mainstream—displaying what has been called “hard-edged lyricism.”

“Pharoah Sanders is . . . from the urgent and spiritual elite of 1960s jazz, a tenor saxophonist with a sound like midnight riptides, the last living member of John Coltrane’s final band.”

—New York Times

Amadou and Mariam

Since the late 1990s, Amadou and Mariam have produced Afro-blues music that mixes traditional Mali sound with rock guitars, Syrian violins, Cuban trumpets, Egyptian ney, Indian tablas, and Dogon percussion.

“Amadou & Mariam take the basic DNA of Western pop and soul and make it jump to irresistible African rhythms, electrified by Amadou’s bluesy guitar.”
