at Rio Salado Habitat Restoration Area

projectWALK, a collaboration between the Museum of Walking, ASU Art Museum and other community partners, includes exhibitions, performances and events across Metropolitan Phoenix. The largest event of this series, theWALK, will take place at the Rio Salado Habitat Restoration Area, a former landfill which is now home to burrowing owls, beavers, over 200 bird species and lush vegetation in downtown Phoenix, Arizona.

Focusing on the everyday activity of walking and listening, this 90-minute walk presents an opportunity for the public to experience a culturally and historically significant site with hundreds of other people moving together in a mindful way through public space.

Tickets are $25 general admission and $15 for students. Participants will receive a

All proceeds generated by theWALK directly benefit the work of the Museum of Walking, founded by School of Art professor Angela Ellsworth. It is the only museum in the U.S. dedicated to the act of walking. Additionally, partial proceeds will go to Native American Connections and The Phoenix Indian School Legacy Project.
