BLACK HISTORY MONTH

In 1853, Anthony Bowen, a former slave, established the first YMCA for African-Americans in Washington, DC.

Many African-American YMCAs became meeting places and rallying points for the Civil Rights Movement.

CELEBRATING THE LIFE AND ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF ANTHONY BOWEN IN HONOR OF BLACK HISTORY MONTH

The first YMCA to serve African Americans was founded in 1853 — eight years before the Civil War and 12 years before slavery was officially abolished in the U.S. — in Washington, D.C., by Anthony Bowen, a freed slave.

Born in 1809, Bowen was the first black man to become a clerk in the U.S. Patent Office and learned of the YMCA from a white co-worker and board member of the Washington YMCA, William Chauncy Langdon. With laws preventing black membership in any organizations of the day, Bowen determined that a YMCA was needed to serve the population.

Bowen's leadership led to the movement finding its foothold in black communities in New York City, Philadelphia, Charleston and Harrisburg by the late 1860's. Today, the YMCA of Metropolitan Washington bears Bowen's name.
